Their Foundation for Giving is Multi-Layered

DuPage Foundation
Doing a world of good in our own backyard®
It is with great pride that I acknowledge the 35th anniversary of the founding of DuPage Foundation and the milestone of surpassing $100 million in total assets (more than $110 in fact), along with the release of the executive summary of our 2020-2024 Strategic Plan. Each of these events continues to solidify the Foundation’s place as DuPage County’s philanthropic leader. They also have enabled us—thanks to you and your support—to grant more than $55 million to raise the quality of life throughout the County and beyond.

It is difficult to imagine the void in our community if three people—Brooks McCormick, Mary Eleanor Wall and Jerry Bradshaw—had not come together that winter of 1986 to formalize the conversations that allowed the Foundation to begin to fulfill its mission. Since then, hundreds more volunteer leaders have helped to make the Foundation what it is today.

And, in times of crisis like the recent pandemic we have all been living through, we can quickly and efficiently alleviate hardship for our neighbors who are hardest hit.

In a recent DuPage Foundation video, Trustee Emeritus Dick Kuhn said it best: “The Foundation is the perfect vehicle between the donor, the agency and the need, and that’s what it’s doing so well.”

That $55 million in grants has delivered food, shelter, health services, mental health services and programs that have provided enormous impact on the environment and the arts community, animal welfare, education and more.

Each donation and grant generates uplifting, positive stories about effective change. As an example, see our cover profile of how Roy and Laura Ann Spencer have used their business success to help others. Then, there’s the Biancalana family: they not only provided nearly 100 children of limited resources a brand new playground, they also honored the memory of their own loving parents with a charming legacy.

You, too, can create your own legacy through DuPage Foundation. Explore the Foundation’s Legacy Society and consider naming DuPage Foundation as a beneficiary of your estate. Then, let us know! We want to make sure your charitable goals and wishes for the future of our community are honored.

As we continue to roll out the 2020-2024 Strategic Plan, we are counting on your support. With your help, millions more dollars can be poured into our community. Thank you.

What’s YOUR Legacy?

“We see our lives being comprised of three phases: Learn, Earn and Return. We have been blessed in so many ways and we are now in our “Return” phase of life. In this regard, we are trying to be very intentional and focused in our giving to support local charities that serve our most vulnerable population. Thankfully, both our estate planning attorney and financial advisor spoke highly of DuPage Foundation, and we’ve now been involved with the Foundation for a number of years. We have tremendous respect for DuPage Foundation and we know we can trust it to honor our intent to support our local charities and causes well into the future.”

-Michael J. and Mary T. Schroock, DuPage Foundation Donor-Advised Fund Advisors and Legacy Society Members

Projected Transfer of Wealth Presents Unprecedented Opportunity for Charitable Impact

More than $9 trillion will be transferred through people’s estates in our country within this decade.* And while a staggering accumulation of wealth has occurred, a lack of economic opportunity and upward mobility have left many struggling and in need of help including many right here in our own backyard. DuPage Foundation is committed to raising the quality of life throughout our community for all residents—especially our most vulnerable—and fueling not-for-profits working to make that happen.

Since the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic, we have seen DuPage residents and not-for-profits forced to contend with unparalleled challenges.

• Food pantries are serving a record number of people
• Homeless shelters are handling a record number of requests for housing
• Utility assistance programs are in high demand
• Mental health issues are impacting every demographic

*According to a study by LOCUS Impact Investing and the Center for Rural Entrepreneurship.
• Our vulnerable senior population is struggling with access to transportation, access to technology and the need for home-delivered meals
• Our arts community is fighting to survive without the ability to sell tickets to live events
• Humane societies are facilitating a record number of animal rescues
• Environmental causes continue to need our support

How Can You Help?
We are so much more impactful when we combine our resources to meet the needs of our community. And that’s what we do best at DuPage Foundation—match passions and resources with needs and opportunities. Whether you choose to give in support of our DuPage Forever Fund, which addresses all of our community’s needs, a particular field of interest, or to create a fund to accomplish your personal goals, together we can raise the quality of life for every resident of our county for generations to come.

Meet the Spencers

A Foundation Based on Love

As owners and operators of Perma-Seal Basement Systems, a basement waterproofing contractor and foundation repair specialist serving Chicago and Northwest Indiana, Roy and Laura Ann Spencer know the importance of a strong foundation. But more than a knowledge of which underlying base or support for a home is best, the Spencers are confident in the personal principles upon which they stand.

“If you build something without a solid foundation, it may be beautiful, but it won’t be sustainable,” said Roy. “Our family and our company are built on our personal values, and those are all about making the world a better place.” While working for several waterproofing companies in the 1970s, Roy was unsure that any were doing honest, ethical work. This was his impetus to start Perma-Seal in 1979. “It’s not just about being better than our competition,” said Roy. “Laura Ann and I, and our employees, our tribe, we want to be better people than we were yesterday.”

DuPage County residents for most of their adult lives, the Spencers currently reside in Naperville where they raised their six children and now enjoy time with two grandchildren. “Naperville really is a diverse community—in economic status, background, race, religion and in challenges, too,” said Roy. “We know it is an affluent community, but I’m struck by how generous people are in giving of their time, talent and treasure.” Laura Ann credits her early involvement with Rotary Club of Naperville Sunrise as the launchpad for their local impact. “We have a good pulse on what’s going on and what the future looks like for Naperville,” she said.

Interested in strategically making their corner of the world better, the Spencers enlisted the help of another type of foundation, DuPage Foundation. This particular institution established by endowment with provision for future maintenance is especially poised to connect donors to area needs—an effective partner for those with personal and professional charitable goals like the Spencers. “The Foundation is plugged into both the community’s crises and the services provided by local not-for-profits,” said Roy, who first heard of the Foundation from his estate planning attorney and Foundation Trustee emeritus, Brett Dale of Huck Bouma PC. Since then, Laura Ann and Roy have been impressed by their experience with the Foundation.

“DuPage Foundation goes above and beyond and is very easy to work with,” said Roy. “We know that just as a permanent home repair has more value than a temporary fix, our giving through the Foundation will have an impact in perpetuity, which is important to us.”

When not “Perma-Sealing,” Laura Ann and Roy enjoy being outdoors, gardening, cooking and fishing. They are also actively involved with Atlas Network, an organization that increases global prosperity by promoting individual freedom, and Conscious Capitalism, a global community of business leaders who operate with purpose and for profit. “Like many conscious capitalists who are doing important, responsible work, we’ve found that the value of having engaged team members and partners always comes back to us,” said Roy.

The Spencers are fortunate to now sit in seats within Perma-Seal as coaches, guides and protectors of the culture they want the company to stand for, a culture that attracts like-minded people committed to sharing with others and, like DuPage Foundation, strives in doing a world of good in our own backyard®.

“The world’s problems can seem daunting, so we try to have an impact on those we interact with on a daily basis,” said Roy. “We empower our vendors, suppliers, communities and tribe, and we see a ripple effect from there.” The Spencers focus on what is within their span of influence and how they can help within their circle. “When Perma-Seal shares, or gives or cares, it influences 300 other lives,” said Laura Ann. “Our team is a part of this giving cycle; they’re helping through us.”

“If you build something without a solid foundation, it may be beautiful, but it won’t be sustainable”

– Roy Spencer

Laura Ann and Roy are coaching one of their sons to serve as successor for their Foundation donor-advised fund. In the future, he’ll continue to recommend grants in alignment with the family’s interests, primarily education, job training and language skills. “It’s easy to write a check,” said Laura Ann. “More importantly, we’re looking for community and societal issues and diving deep with not-for-profits’ guidance to determine which programs we want to get behind and how our support can help break downward cycles.”

“I’ve been very fortunate in my work and have had many opportunities along the way,” said Roy. “In our company, as well as in our community, it feels good to be able to provide others with similar opportunities for success.”
There’s a special sound that evokes a simpler more carefree time for many people: the sound of children laughing and playing on a playground. For life-long Chicagoans Minnie and Eddie Ceragioli, that sound meant pure joy. Now, thanks to a lifetime of the Ceragioli’s hard work and the remarkable foresight and vision of their daughter, Judy Biancalana, and her family, the children living in Wheaton’s Marian Park Apartments have the opportunity to make those fun-loving sounds on a brand new playground.

The thrill of swings, the swoosh of a slide and the bump of a seesaw are reveries many adults reading this may take for granted from their own childhoods. For those lucky enough to have grown up in a place where a playground was a normal part of childhood, that sound inevitably brings back happy memories of endless days and ceaseless movement. But the Ceragiolis were children of the Depression.

A Childhood Without Playgrounds

Judy Biancalana said, “My dad started shining shoes as a very young child. My parents didn’t get the chance to play on playgrounds because they had to work, even as children.”

As children of Italian immigrants living during the Depression in Chicago, times were tough for Judy’s parents. Money was scarce. “They grew up very poor. If it were today, they would be considered children living in deep poverty. But they never felt deprived because everyone they knew was poor. They had friends and they used their imaginations. My mother grew up in the Depression, which was why she saved money. She was very concerned because she felt that someone could take it away,” said Judy.

Minnie finished high school and went to work at Goldblatt’s Department Store, where she finished her career decades later as a human resources professional. Eddie, with some high school education, worked at International Harvester. As a married couple, the Ceragiolis both worked--and saved money--their entire lives.

Devoted to Family and Giving Back

Judy said her mom also volunteered to help others. “She wanted to join the PTA, but one member said a woman who works wouldn’t have time to be in the PTA and tried to prevent her from joining. But others let my mom join and she became one of their most passionate volunteers and even did more than that member who didn’t want to let her in.”

The Ceragiolis were devoted parents to Judy and devoted grandparents to Judy’s daughter, Natalie. Judy said, “My dad used to love to take Natalie to the park. When they were older, both my parents would go to the parks just to watch the kids play. I think it comes from not having had that when they were kids.”
How a New Playground Came to Be

When Minnie Ceragioli died in 2010, just twelve hours shy of her 90th birthday, she had already set up a trust through DuPage County lawyer, Daniel Hands. Having lost her dad prior to that, Judy wanted something to honor her parents. Hands suggested Judy set up a donor-advised fund at DuPage Foundation. “My main goal was that my parents wouldn’t be forgotten and the money would go for things they supported and is doing some good for others,” said Judy.

She continued, “My parents were interested in creating spaces for kids to play and be children, so when I heard about the need at Marian Park Apartments for a playground, I thought that would be a perfect fit.”

Judy had learned of the need at the facility, a Mercy Housing Lakefront property, through Barb Szczepaniak, DuPage Foundation’s vice president for programs. The grant was recommended by the Biancalanas from the Edward and Minnie Ceragioli Fund which supplemented the Foundation’s signature Community Needs Grant Program last year.

A Collaborative Construction Project

Mercy Housing Lakefront is a not-for-profit that provides affordable housing for individuals, families and older adults with low incomes, with onsite supportive services. About 100 children live at Marian Park Apartments with their families. The community also offers affordable housing for senior adults. Marian Park had been in need of new playground equipment for several years. Mercy Housing Lakefront had applied to and received a Keurig Dr. Pepper-KABOOM! Let’s Play Construction Grant, but additional funds were needed in order to build the new playground. The Ceragioli Fund grant, which matched the KABOOM! grant, made it possible for the playground to be completed.

Maggie Dodge, corporate & foundation relations manager for Mercy Housing Lakefront, said, “The kids were waiting eagerly for the chance to play on the equipment, and the older adults were excited to see it being done. As soon as it was ready, the kids were on it, playing and having a blast. The added benefit is the seniors can watch them play from their apartment windows.”

Dodge added, “A community collaboration brought the project together, but we wouldn’t have been able to complete the project without the Biancalanas and their support which allowed us to take advantage of the Kaboom! grant. Northwestern Medicine and USG Corp. also underwrote the cost of the construction equipment rental.”

Judy said the Ceragiolis would have loved this playground. “There’s something about that sound of children playing: It makes you feel more positive and makes you feel good. My parents were very careful with how they spent their money. This was what both of them would have wanted.”

DuPage Foundation’s Access to Recreation (A2R) Endowment Fund

DuPage Foundation has supported numerous park and recreation programs with grants throughout its history both from the Community Needs Grant Program, which funded the Marian Park Apartments playground through a special donation from the Biancalana family, and from individual donors through their own donor-advised funds. In addition, the Foundation launched the Access to Recreation (A2R) Initiative in 2007 to create an endowment to support accessible recreation projects. Numerous grants and many additional donors, including the JCS Arts, Health & Education Fund have supported the work. Among the most prominent projects are:

- Forest Glen Park (Woodridge, IL)
- Knolls Community Park (Lombard, IL)
- Jefferson Playground at the Jefferson Early Childhood Center (Wheaton, IL)
- Sensory Garden Playground (Wheaton, IL)
Curious about what the charitable giving landscape looks like for 2021? As we wait to see if the new Biden administration and Congress will take up significant tax reform after passing a third stimulus package, several charitable giving incentives have already been enacted for 2021 to address the impact of the pandemic.

Here are some opportunities to consider as you plan your giving for the year:

$300 Tax Deduction for Non-Itemizers Extended and Expanded to $600 for Couples Filing Jointly

Last year, the CARES Act created an allowance for an above-the-line charitable deduction of up to $300 for individuals and households claiming the standard deduction. This allowance has been extended for 2021 to continue at $300 for individuals while expanding to $600 for married couples filing jointly. The deduction applies only for cash contributions made to qualifying 501(c)(3) charities and excludes donations to donor-advised funds, private foundations and supporting organizations.

Expanded Tax Deduction for Itemizers Giving Cash Extended

The CARES Act provision temporarily increasing the limit itemizers can deduct from their Adjusted Gross Income (AGI) for cash contributions from 60% to 100% has been extended for 2021. The deduction applies only for cash contributions made to qualifying 501(c)(3) charities and excludes donations to donor-advised funds, private foundations and supporting organizations. Taxpayers who make this 100% of AGI election can also carry forward unused qualified cash gift deductions up to five years. Talk to your tax advisor for more detail.

Cash gifts to donor-advised funds are eligible to be deducted up to the normal 60% of AGI with a five-year carryforward.

Contributions of appreciated assets held for a year or more (stocks, mutual funds, real estate, closely-held business interests, etc.) to qualified charities, donor-advised funds and supporting organizations remain limited to a deduction of up to 30% of donors’ AGI. Contributions of such assets to private foundations remain capped at 20%. A five-year carryforward also exists for unused qualified gift deductions of long-term appreciated assets up to their regular limits.
Corporate Tax Deduction Increase of 25% Extended

For corporations, the usual 10% gross income-based limitation remains increased to 25% during 2021 for charitable contributions made in cash to any qualifying 501(c)(3) charity, excluding donor-advised funds, private foundations and supporting organizations.

Qualified Charitable Distributions

Qualified Charitable Distributions (QCDs) remain a powerful strategy for seniors—particularly with the restoration of Required Minimum Distributions (RMDs) in 2021. Donors who are 70½ or older may elect to make charitable donations directly from their traditional and other types of IRAs to their favorite charities and have the donations reduce their Adjusted Gross Income (AGI). For donors who are 72 and older, these QCD donations will also count toward their annual RMD. The limit on these donations remains at $100,000 per individual and $200,000 per married couple. However, with the enactment of the SECURE Act, IRA account owners must now reduce their intended QCDs by any contribution amounts made into their IRAs after age 70½ (the age cap that was put in place to make IRA contributions before the passage of the SECURE Act), to the extent they have not already been used to reduce their QCDs. Be sure to talk to your tax advisor for further guidance if you have contributed to your IRA after turning 70½ and wish to make a QCD. QCDs also may not be made to donor-advised funds, private foundations or supporting organizations. However, they are the perfect tool for donating to any number of local charities and community-focused funds here at DuPage Foundation.

Additional QCD Tip: Because RMDs are taxable, donors wishing to make QCDs should consider making them early in the year, before taking any RMDs, since QCDs taken later cannot offset taxes already incurred on RMDs.

Don’t Need Your Stimulus Check? Consider Donating It!

If you have received a stimulus check as part of the government’s COVID-19 Relief efforts and don’t need it, consider doing a world of good in your own backyard and donating it to one or more of your favorite local charities or one or more of our many community-focused funds here at DuPage Foundation. As many of our neighbors, businesses and not-for-profits continue to struggle with the devastating economic and health consequences of the pandemic, your help is needed now more than ever.

Just over a year ago, the world was stunned—and shuttered—when news of a global pandemic halted travel, shut down businesses and forced those who could to work at home. Not-for-profit organizations were hit hard as their volunteer bases dried up and demands for their services multiplied overnight. It’s hard to imagine just where DuPage County would be without DuPage Foundation’s COVID-19 Response Fund and the $1.7 million it has poured into the community thus far.

We took a look at the percentages: For Health & Human Services support, $1,372,650 in grants went to food pantries, organizations serving the homeless, and organizations delivering physical and mental health services and more. $327,350 was granted to local arts organizations that were hit particularly hard. As employers with thousands of workers, they are crucial to enhancing the local economy in myriad ways. These funds were distributed in addition to the grants from the Foundation’s signature Community Needs Grant Program (Community Needs or CNGP), which granted over $1 million to not-for-profits in the area of Health & Human Services, Education, Arts & Culture, Environment and Animal Welfare in FY20.

Next Generation Initiative
Connecting and Collaborating at Trivia Night

The Foundation’s Next Generation Initiative (NGI) helps Naperville residents Nathan and Paige Ronchetti fulfill a passion for lifting up their local community by providing them with opportunities to connect, learn and give back. NGI Members since 2019, Nathan and Paige have learned first-hand about the many ways local not-for-profits, large and small, are doing a world of good in our own backyard.®

“DuPage County has such diverse needs. Through NGI, we’ve been exposed to so many organizations helping our neighbors in need,” said Nathan.

“DuPage Foundation allows us to give back to a community that’s given us so much. As members of NGI, we are more connected with the needs of our neighbors”
- Nathan and Paige Ronchetti

At NGI’s fourth annual – and first virtual – Charity Trivia Night on February 24, the Ronchettis put together a team to play for Little Friends Inc., a local not-for-profit that empowers people of all ages experiencing autism, intellectual and emotional disabilities and their families to live, learn, work and thrive in their communities.

Playing against 28 other teams, the Ronchettis’ team, Team Jared + the Cleveland Spiders, rose to the top! They clinched the win and the honor of recommending a $1,500 grant to their charity of choice, Little Friends. The event also succeeded in netting more than $6,000 for the Foundation’s NGI Fund to help build its endowment and support its grants and activities throughout the year.

Join in the fun by becoming a 2021 NGI member or sponsor today! Memberships start at $100 and sponsorships begin at $500.

Cleve Carney
Connection:

Cleve Carney, for whom the art museum at COD is named, was a DuPage Foundation Trustee and Trustee Emeritus who played a significant role in escalating fundraising efforts in the Foundation’s early years. A longtime collector of contemporary art, Mr. Carney also was passionate about public art institutions. He donated roughly $1 million in cash and art to help establish the Cleve Carney Art Gallery at the College’s McAninch Arts Center.

Mr. Carney’s long tradition of giving earned him the title of West Suburban Philanthropic Network’s Philanthropic Leadership Award in 2004 and Philanthropist of the Year in 2006.

In preparation for the upcoming Frida Kahlo exhibit, the Cleve Carney Art Gallery underwent a $3 million expansion and transitioned into the Cleve Carney Museum of Art, complete with a grade LED lighting system, security system and climate control system to maintain the standards of the American Alliance of Museums.

“An exhibition of this magnitude in the museum that bears Cleve Carney’s name definitely honors his legacy. He was passionate about many areas of philanthropy — the arts, the environment and the general welfare of people in the community. He would have been thrilled,” said Dave McGowan, president & CEO, DuPage Foundation.

For a family living in poverty, taking a new baby home from the hospital is both joyous and fraught with challenges. As just one example of the perils ahead, consider car seats. With little money, how does a family choose between keeping their baby safe in transit (and not breaking the law) or providing food, medicine or housing? When families are stressed over such weighty decisions, the importance of early childhood development can often become back-burner, even though experts say it should be among the first concerns for a young child. That’s where Bright & Early DuPage steps in.

Delivering Services to Lift Up Children in Under-Resourced Areas

Consider Willowbrook Corner, located in the far southeastern corner of DuPage County. DuPage County Board Member Julie Renehan said, “We have a community needs assessment that shows this census track has one of the largest low-income minority populations.”

There, the Willowbrook Corner Early Childhood Collaborative (WCECC) is making a big impact thanks to funding from the Snodgrass Family Fund of DuPage Foundation through the Foundation’s Bright & Early DuPage initiative.

Anne M. Jeans School is the Hub

The Snodgrass Family Fund grant enables the YWCA Metropolitan Chicago and Burr Ridge Community Consolidated School District 180 (CCSD180) to lead the collaboration. They have partnered with many other organizations, such as other local not-for-profits, churches and other religious organizations, and individuals to provide services to area families. The Anne M. Jeans School, a preK-4 elementary school in Burr Ridge, is the hub for a variety of programming designed to deliver services. Dr. Tom Schneider, superintendent for CCSD180, said, “Bright & Early DuPage is incredibly important for our families so they have access to birth to five support systems. It fills a need for our families to find additional resources as they start on the journey of being parents. We’re thrilled to be able to work as partners with Bright & Early DuPage and we are incredibly appreciative of DuPage Foundation and the Snodgrass family for the program.”

One Area of Many in DuPage County Needing Services

Willowbrook Corner is just one of many communities scattered throughout DuPage County where people do not enjoy the amenities and resources that typically come with residency in some of the more upscale suburban towns, despite being near such resources.

To access the Bright & Early DuPage FY20 Annual Report as well as read more about the challenges Willowbrook Corner faces and how WCECC is working to prepare children for kindergarten, please visit dupagefoundation.org/BrightAndEarly
